Highway Patrol Gives Ohio Commies Polite Heave-Ho From Statehouse

COLUMBUS, May 19—Admitted Communists and other liberals opposing an Ohio senate bill to bar Reds from public payrolls in the Buckeye State were given a polite but firm heave-ho from the statehouse here by the highway patrol last night.

None of the spectators who jam-packed the senate judiciary committee-room for the first hearing on the bill created anything resembling a disturbance during the session, although Committee Chairman Howard Metzenbaum (D-Cleveland) twice warned them against demonstrations or outbursts.

However, when the meeting was adjourned, Hugh Delacy of Cleveland, state director of the Progressive Party, mounted a chair in the room and began a meeting of his own.

For ten minutes all went well. Then the senate sergeant-of-arms ordered the room cleared so it could be locked up for what remained of the night.

A half-dozen stalwart highway patrolmen, augmented by about eight Columbus detectives in plain clothes as well as FBI agents and Army intelligence agents, moved into the room and formed an unobtrusive but efficient cordon back of the spectators.

The officers then walked quietly toward the doors, herding the crowd before them. Down the steps they went, through the rotunda, and out into the night.

Admitted Communists present at the hearing included Morton Chancey, state secretary of the Communist Party; Robert Campbell, state education director of the party, and Anthony Krchnarek, Cuyahoga County

Ag Survey Shows Drop Continuing

May Total Expected To Be Down 3 Pct.

WASHINGTON, May 19 — The Agriculture Department today predicted a new wave of mild price cuts on meat and grains and a slight dip below last year in farmers' income for the second consecutive month.

The department said that both livestock and crop prices this month "will probably average a little lower" than in April and "substantially below" May, 1948.

As a result, the income of farmers is expected to fall slightly more than three percent below last May but remain five percent above April, 1949.

Agriculture officials explained that farmers are marketing more this month than last or in May, 1948, but are having to accept continually lower prices.

* * *

THE DEPARTMENT forecast that the slump in farm income will be even greater for the first five months of this year than in May, alone.

A special agriculture report estimated that farmers' receipts for the five-month period will be down more than three and one-half percent below 1948—again due to falling prices.

Here's a general breakdown of what the department thinks the price tags on farm products will show by the end of this month on a national basis, compared with April:

"Small declines" in meat prices; slightly higher milk prices; prices "averaging about the same or even slightly lower" for most grains sold by farmers on the regular market.

The department added, however, that virtually all farm products are expected to be selling under the year-ago level for May, as well as the five-month period.

The study anticipated that farm income from livestock, poultry and dairy products from January through May will total about $6.3 billion—seven percent below last year.

CROP RECEIPTS, making up the balance of farmers' income, were estimated at $3.7 billion—"slightly above last year" and

Turnpike Given Nod

Northern Ohio To Get Toll Road

COLUMBUS, May 19—A toll turnpike across the farmlands of Northern Ohio became a virtual certainty today.

The Ohio house of representatives passed, 72-49, the senate-approved Winter bill, to permit the construction of superhighways with private capital.

Only senate concurrence in minor house committee amendments remains before the bill is sent to the governor's desk.

Since Gov. Frank Lausche's highway director, Ted Kauer, endorsed the bill before the committees of both houses, it is expected that the chief executive will sign the bill into law.

A motion to reconsider the vote by which the house passed the bill may delay its journey back to the senate. The motion is expected today or Monday from Rep. Mark McElroy (D-Cuyahoga), an opponent of the bill who switched his vote from "no" to "yes" to become eligible to make the motion.

* * *

IN THREE hours of debate on the measure, two amendments were beaten down and a score of speeches were deliverd. Finally, 15 Republicans joined 57 Democrats to pass the measure.

Voting against it were seven Democrats and 42 Republicans.

The bill sets up a five-member commission, including the highway director, which is given the right to condemn rights-of-way and issue bonds to construct toll superhighways similar to the famed Pennsylvania Turnpike. The bonds, however, do not become obligations of the state, but are to be retired entirely from turnpike revenues.

Location of any turnpike would be determined by the governor on recommendation of the commission.

Although the route of any turnpike has not been definitely determined, the route usually discussed would start about eight miles south of Youngstown, at Petersburg, and extend 234 miles across Ohio south of Cleveland and Toledo.

The turnpike, which would connect with the proposed extension of the Pennsylvania Turnpike, would cost an estimated $200 million. After the bonds were retired, the divided highway would revert to the state's free highway system.

Leftwingers Feel Lash As Murray Starts Cleanup

WASHINGTON, May 19—CIO's leftwing unions are on the run today under the lash of an implacable Philip Murray.

The soft-spoken CIO president has demonstrated in the last 48 hours that the Commies are through in his organization.

In two days, the CIO executive board has:

1. Withdrawn from the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions and announced its intention to join the American Federation of Labor in setting up a Democratic world labor body.

2. Decided to recommend to the next CIO convention in Cleveland Oct. 31 that the charter of the leftwing Farm Equipment Workers Union be revoked

WORLD PEACE IS GOAL

Brazil Chief Promises Full Support Of U.S.

WASHINGTON, May 19—Brazilian President Dutra told a joint session of the U. S. Congress that "in this moment fraught with ordeals for humanity" Brazil accompanies the United States in its fight to preserve the world from "renewed bloodshed."

Dutra placed his nation "shoulder - to - shoulder" with the U. S. in the overall effort to protect Democracy and ensure world peace through the United Nations and the Inter-American Defense Treaty.

The Brazilian said that on the world and continental planes "we offer our integral and unselfish cooperation to the United Nations and to the organization of American states."

He declared that Brazil seeks to put into execution the purposes of the UN "which aim at the establishment of a better understanding among nations as the only means to ensure world peace." He added:

* * *

"THIS COMMON task is the reflection of the perfect understanding which prevails between us and which is rendered more solid each moment through so many other manifestations of close understanding."

President Dutra spoke in Portuguese which then was interpreted for the House and Senate meeting in joint session in tribute to the visiting Brazilian leader.

The Brazilian leader declared that the highest aspiration of the United States and his homeland "is to forge ahead guarded by institutions which ensure men the free exercise of his rights, in an atmosphere of tolerance and justice." He continued:

"In the international field this friendship, through its practical manifestations and by virtue of its example, is the greatest guarantee of good understanding and comprehension among the other sister nations in this hemisphere."

Speaking of his own country, Dutra said the Brazilian government "is proud of its dignifying subordination to the dictates of law and of its fidelity to the standards of international morality."

The Brazilian chief said he did not hesitate to place in his administration prominent members of opposing political parties to achieve harmony among his people so national problems would be faced "to the advantage of all."

Political Angle Said To Be Key In Eisler Case

LONDON, May 19—Home Secretary James Chuter Ede told parliament today that Britain will release bail-jumping Communist Gerhardt Eisler if it is decided the case is a political one.

Ede informed the House of Commons he will make his decision when a formal request for extradition is received from the United States.

He said he could not accept newspaper reports that Eisler is a political fugitive, but added that if he decides this is the case "it will be my duty to see that further proceedings do not take place."

Ede accepted full responsibility for Eisler's forcible seizure aboard the Polish Liner Batory off Southampton.

Stanley Moore, Eisler's attorney, said that the U. S. Singer Paul Robeson is actively engaged in a fund-raising drive to supply money for Eisler's legal fight to prevent his extradition to the United States.

British Communists are planning a mass demonstration of protest against Eisler's arrest and imprisonment outside the Brixton jail where he is awaiting action on his case.

Reds Rapped At Pootung

Nationalists Claim 'Back Door' Victory

SHANGHAI, May 19 — (Censored) — Chinese Nationalists claimed today to have repulsed with heavy losses a Communist attack on Pootung, "Shanghai's back door."

They also rushed reinforcements against new Communist threats from the north and east.

A Reuters dispatch from Canton reported that more than 20,000 Nationalists in the Kiangsi, Fukien and Kwangtung areas—embracing a major portion of Central and Eastern China—have revolted and gone over to the Communists.

The rebellion was said to be headed by Gen. Li-Chie, administrative head of the 9th area of the Kwangtung provincial government.

Reuters said that Shanghai newspapers reported "precipitate deterioration" of Nationalist defenses on Hanghai's southern front. Observers said the climax of the battle is at hand.

* * *

THOUSANDS of government troops and artillery were rushed to Sanlintang, nine miles southeast of the heart of Shanghai and civilians were barred from Yangtzepoo where the American-owned Shanghai Power Co. is located.

The Shanghai garrison said that Nationalist troops surrounded and wiped out two regiments of Communist troops at Pootung, directly across the Whangpoo river from Shanghai, and at Tungkow, five miles northeast of Pootung.

Both Pootung and Tungkow are vital in the Nationalist effort to keep the Communists from blocking the Whangpoo river which is Shanghai's link

Parliamentary Knot Stalls Move To Change Sales Tax

COLUMBUS, May 19 — The fate of the bill to substitute a gross receipts tax for Ohio's present three percent, stamp-plan sales tax—and the fate of the entire "Youngstown plan" for more aid to schools and local governments—rests today on the longest rollcall in the legislature's history.

A rollcall on the bill by the senate taxation committee started yesterday morning, was continued until the late afternoon, and then, when the committee failed to have a quorum present, continued again until next Monday night.

That will make the rollcall last more than six days.

The bill is designed to raise an additional $30 million over the present sales tax yield. It is the measure to finance the so-called "Youngstown plan," passed by the senate last week, which would give the schools $27.5 million more for $25 a month pay increases and the cities a flat 15 percent of the sales tax take.

* * *

HOWEVER, if the tax bill dies in the senate, it will be practically impossible for the house to pass the other parts of the "Youngstown plan."

A motion to recommend the tax plan for passage received only five votes in the taxation committee, which normally would have killed the bill since six votes are needed.

However, Committee Chairman Nicholas Bernard (D-Youngstown) a supporter of the bill, noted that Sen. Edward Welsh (D-Dayton) had not voted—and his vote would have put the bill across.

Bernard insisted that Welsh had to vote under senate rules,

PENNY PINCHERS ALSO HIT

Flying Beer Bottles, Bike Tags Irritating Cop Boss

Temperature outside registered only 80 degrees, but the inner sanctum of Circleville police station was rapidly being heated to far above that Thursday morning. And the source of the thermal disturbance was Chief William McCrady.

Several things, ranging from a flying beer bottle to bicycle tags, were listed as reasons for the aroused ire of the cop boss.

The chief says he has nothing against beer bottles that fly per se. But he does object when they fly in his direction, as one did the other night.

He said the bottle came from a passing auto and landed on a cement walk leading to the porch of his home. Chief McCrady said he was sitting there with his wife and two-year-old grandson.

* * *

THEY WERE showered with glass splinters when the bottle burst on the walk. No one was cut, however, the chief said.

The case against the bicycle tags was simplicity itself. Not enough have been sold.

"Only 300 have been sold, and I know there are more than 800 bikes in Circleville," McCrady said. "The owners have had more than 30 days to come in and buy tags. If they can't raise 25-cents in that time, I don't think they have any business owning a bike."

He said that last year more than 750 tags were sold before the department's supply ran out, and that school authorities had asked police to obtain more this year so that a record of bicycle owners could be compiled. Sale of the tags began April 1.

Chief McCrady indicated he would probably ask council to "put some teeth" into the ordinance requiring bicycle owners to obtain licenses.

Then the chief's chatter switched from bicycles to double-parked autos. McCrady had a word or two of warning to issue against that, too. Drivers pinching pennies due parking meters formed his chief target.

* * *

"THEY GET OUT of their cars after double parking, look both ways to see if there's an officer around. If there isn't, they go about their shopping."

He said one man recently went to the extreme of double-parking while getting a haircut.

'I've ordered my men to keep close check on double parking—day or night," McCrady said.

Reds Apply New Needle In Berlin Situation

BERLIN, May 19—The Soviets imposed new restrictions on Berlin-bound truck traffic today and Western officials called it part of a "needling" process that leaves the city "still half-blockaded."

Maj. Gen. George R. Hays, deputy military governor, said new attempts will be made by negotiation to break through obstacles being raised by the Soviets. He remarked that if these fail "we have no choice except a protest at high level."

Latest Russian move was to detour all trucks for Berlin through an inconvenient new checkpoint 20 miles north of Helmstedt on the British-Soviet zonal border.

Allied military officials viewed this and other Soviet maneuvers as an attempt to "take advantage"—at the expense of the Western Powers—of the four power agreement which lifted the blockade on May 12.

* * *

THE NEWLY-designated truck checkpoint is Buestedt, which has no first-class highway like the autobahn that runs through Helmstedt.

Allied officials call the Buestedt road a "washboard" and feel a bad bottleneck for Berlin-bound traffic is certain to ensue.

Yesterday, the Russians announced that all traffic of goods to Berlin must have a Soviet zone clearance before proceeding. Today, they abandoned this stipulation and agreed to pass traffic on basic documentation only, providing it proceeds through Buestedt.

Allied authorities must delete the name Helmstedt from all papers and substitute Buestedt, a seemingly simple matter but one that is bound to delay truck movement for several hours.

Hays said he is "forced to admit" that the Soviets are seeking to gain advantages at the expense of the Western nations, which he said suspended the blockade and counter-blockade in good faith.

Hays said that he is "reluctant" to confirm some of the bitter observations made by some of his assistants regarding the situation, but added: "Berlin is still half-blockaded."

Leist To Seek Board Election

Carl Leist, president of the Circleville board of education, has taken out a petition for re-election in the November general election.

Leist and Mrs. Howard B. Moore, vice-president to the panel, are the only two board members whose terms expire this year. Leist is seeking election to his second full term on the board.

Mrs. Moore has not yet declared whether she will seek reelection.

Thousands Buzz Around After Route 23 Wreck

It was a traffic accident, and thousands were involved — but spectators were few. Even the mighty Ohio State Highway Patrol showed a reluctance to stay.

The accident occurred on U. S. Route 23 Thursday morning, when a trailer loaded with bee hives came loose from an auto and upset.

Bees boiled out of the broken hives, and in a matter of seconds the highway was darkened by a cloud of the angry insects.

James Lett, 52, of West Portsmouth spent three hours rounding them up, while State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells stood guard—at a distance.

* * *

"THIS WAS ONE traffic accident where we had no "kibitzers," Wells grinned. "Motorists preferred to wind up their windows and depart."

He said Lett was enroute to Bucyrus with the bees when the accident occurred. His son, Raymond, was stung several times by the insects, the patrolman reported, adding:

"They were crawling all over

Swedes Refuse Release Soviet Refugee Flier

STOCKHOLM, May 19—Swedish officials today awaited the next Russian move in a diplomatic tug-of-war over a fleeing Russian flier who crash-landed in Stockholm.

The Soviet embassy in the Swedish capital demanded custody of the Red air force lieutenant as soon as they learned of his arrival, a demand the Swedes rejected.

The flier said he is a political refugee who flew from near Riga, Estonia, because he "did not like it in Russia" and because his wife is a prisoner.

The pilot, who was not identified by name, was flying a single seater fighter plane identified as an LA-11 when he landed at a military airport near Stockholm.

He was slightly injured in his crash landing last night. He is now in the custody of the Swedish aliens commission.

Gotham Ready To Fete Clay

NEW YORK, May 19 — Gen. Lucius D. Clay, America's soldier-statesman victor of the Berlin "cold war," receives a hero's welcome home today from New York's millions.

A stirring tribute will be accorded the retiring military governor of Germany in a round of festivities highlighted by the traditional ticker-tape parade up Broadway to City Hall.

More than a million persons are expected to line the streets as the general's motorcade makes its way to City Hall for an official greeting by Mayor William O'Dwyer.

STOCKHOLM, May 19—Swedish officials today awaited the next Russian move in a diplomatic tug-of-war over a fleeing Russian flier who crash-landed in Stockholm.

The Soviet embassy in the Swedish capital demanded custody of the Red air force lieutenant as soon as they learned of his arrival, a demand the Swedes rejected.

The flier said he is a political refugee who flew from near Riga, Estonia, because he "did not like it in Russia" and because his wife is a prisoner.

The pilot, who was not identified by name, was flying a single seater fighter plane identified as an LA-11 when he landed at a military airport near Stockholm.

He was slightly injured in his crash landing last night. He is now in the custody of the Swedish aliens commission.

Flying Beer Bottles, Bike Tags Irritating Cop Boss

Temperature outside registered only 80 degrees, but the inner sanctum of Circleville police station was rapidly being heated to far above that Thursday morning. And the source of the thermal disturbance was Chief William McCrady.

Several things, ranging from a flying beer bottle to bicycle tags, were listed as reasons for the aroused ire of the cop boss.

The chief says he has nothing against beer bottles that fly per se. But he does object when they fly in his direction, as one did the other night.

He said the bottle came from a passing auto and landed on a cement walk leading to the porch of his home. Chief McCrady said he was sitting there with his wife and two-year-old grandson.

• • •

THEY WERE showered with glass splinters when the bottle burst on the walk. No one was cut, however, the chief said.

The case against the bicycle tags was simplicity itself. Not enough have been sold.

"Only 300 have been sold, and I know there are more than 800 bikes in Circleville," McCrady said. "The owners have had more than 30 days to come in and buy tags. If they can't raise 25-cents in that time, I don't think they have any business owning a bike."

He said that last year more than 750 tags were sold before the department's supply ran out, and that school authorities had asked police to obtain more this year so that a record of bicycle owners could be compiled. Sale of the tags began April 1.

Chief McCrady indicated he would probably ask council to "put some teeth" into the ordinance requiring bicycle owners to obtain licenses.

Then the chief's chatter switched from bicycles to double-parked autos. McCrady had a word or two of warning to issue against that, too. Drivers pinching pennies due parking meters formed his chief target.

• • •

"THEY GET OUT of their cars after double parking, look both ways to see if there's an officer around. If there isn't, they go about their shopping."

He said one man recently went to the extreme of double-parking while getting a haircut.

'I've ordered my men to keep close check on double parking—day or night," McCrady said.

Leist To Seek Board Election

Carl Leist, president of the Circleville board of education, has taken out a petition for re-election in the November general election.

Leist and Mrs. Howard B. Moore, vice-president to the panel, are the only two board members whose terms expire this year. Leist is seeking election to his second full term on the board.

Mrs. Moore has not yet declared whether she will seek reelection.

Thousands Buzz Around After Route 23 Wreck

It was a traffic accident, and thousands were involved — but spectators were few. Even the mighty Ohio State Highway Patrol showed a reluctance to stay.

The accident occurred on U. S. Route 23 Thursday morning, when a trailer loaded with bee hives came loose from an auto and upset.

Bees boiled out of the broken hives, and in a matter of seconds the highway was darkened by a cloud of the angry insects.

James Lett, 52, of West Portsmouth spent three hours rounding them up, while State Highway Patrolman C. E. Wells stood guard—at a distance.

• • •

"THIS WAS ONE traffic accident where we had no "kibitzers," Wells grinned. "Motorists preferred to wind up their windows and depart."

He said Lett was enroute to Bucyrus with the bees when the accident occurred. His son, Raymond, was stung several times by the insects, the patrolman reported, adding:

"They were crawling all over

The department said that the April-May gain in this field "will be unusual" and due chiefly to exceptionally large quantities of wheat and smaller quantities of other grains being sold or mortgaged to the government's Commodity Credit Corp.

The actual hearing was given over to supporters of the bill, with the opponents to be given their innings at a hearing next week or later.

Supporters of the bill were the various veterans' organizations, including the American Legion, the VFW, the Amvets, the Air Force Association, and Robert R. Bangham, representing the Ohio Manufacturers Association.

All supported th principle of the bill, which would require all elective or appointed public workers, including teachers, to take a non-Communist oath. They admitted, however, that the bill might have to be redrafted to protect constitutional freedoms.

After the session, Delacy told his followers that there was presented "no evidence that any intelligent man would consider evidence—only opinions."

He urged his listeners to contact their senators over the week-end and urge them to defeat the bill. He also struck at newspapers for failure to publicize the bill or its contents and "pretending that this is just another loyalty oath and not a blow at freedom."

Asserting that the bill was "a nefarious plot against the liberties of the people," Delacy added that "any honest man who reads this bill will be against it."

Landis, former chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, passed his first bar examination last August in the District of Columbia. He is now associated with Former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

Fire Chieftain Shakes Finger At Youngsters

A pile of papers caused Circleville Fire Chief Talmer Wise to issue a stern warning Thursday morning.

The chief's concern was aroused when the papers, piled in the center of a barn owned by Mrs. I. B. Newton of North Court street were set on fire. The warning was directed at children who, Chief Wise believes, stacked them and applied a match.

The fire department was called to put out a blaze in the barn at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday. Chief Wise said damage was negligible.

"But it could have been very bad," he said. "Besides destroying the barn, which is a large one, the fire could have spread to surrounding structures if it had not been noticed in time.

"Fire is not a thing for kids to toy with."

But Welsh contended that the rules did not apply to committee actions, and answered only "not voting" each of the seven times his name was called.

Bernard then held up the rollcall for some 15 minutes while the sergeant-at-arms was dispatched to get a ruling either from Senate Clerk Dwight Matchette or Lt. Gov. George D. Nye, the presiding officer of the senate.

Matchette refused to enter the controversy, and Nye was unavailable. Bernard then recessed the hearing—which some of the senators said was a questionable action which might be attacked in court.

THE BILL proposes to save $6 million in administration costs over the stamp plan; $6 million on restoration of the one-cent tax bracket, and $8 million on "casual sales"—such as sales of furniture or autos by private owners—when such sales are over $100.

Even if the plan should be defeated, however, there was a new, administration bill introduced in the senate to replace one of its sections.

The measure, introduced by Majority Leader Margaret Mahoney (D-Cleveland) would eliminate the present three percent vendors' discount which last year amounted to $4 million.

It would also wipe out the present private sales tax stamp agencies, but give a one percent commission—about $1,160,000 a year—to the general funds of cities, counties or townships whose officials were tax stamp agents. At present some $600,000 a year goes to private agents as commissions.

May 7 Week's Business Shows Hike Over '48

Business in Pickaway County during the week ending May 7 was better than for the same week a year ago, although the showing for the entire year up to that date failed to reach the 1948 mark, according to a report of sales tax stamps sold here.

State Treasurer Don Ebright said sales of the stamps for the week ending May 7 amounted to $5,162.56. A year ago the figure was $3,988.32 for the same period. Collections for the year were listed as $69,786.11, a drop from last year $70,022.68.

Throughout the state automotive supplies topped the list in volume of stamps sold during the week, with $698,025.74 being listed. For the same period in 1948 the figure was given as $529,109.38.

Food, general stores, furniture, building materials and chain stores showed a drop from last year's sales, while clothing sales were up, according to the report.

Burglar Fails To Enter Office

An attempt to break into an office on the Arnold Moats used car lot of East Main street was reported by Police Chief William McCrady Thursday.

He said the attempt was made Tuesday night when someone broke a window in the office. He said the offender reached through the hole and unfastened the latch, but apparently did not enter.

Articles lying on the window ledge were undisturbed, and nothing was reported missing from the office, the chief said.

Other leaders of delegations came from Toledo, Akron, Canton, Lorain, Youngstown, Cleveland, Warren, Cincinnati, Dayton, Steubenville, Bellaire, East Liverpool and Yorkville to register their protests.

The actual hearing was given over to supporters of the bill, with the opponents to be given their innings at a hearing next week or later.

Supporters of the bill were the various veterans' organizations, including the American Legion, the VFW, the Amvets, the Air Force Association, and Robert R. Bangham, representing the Ohio Manufacturers Association.

All supported th principle of the bill, which would require all elective or appointed public workers, including teachers, to take a non-Communist oath. They admitted, however, that the bill might have to be redrafted to protect constitutional freedoms.

After the session, Delacy told his followers that there was presented "no evidence that any intelligent man would consider evidence—only opinions."

He urged his listeners to contact their senators over the week-end and urge them to defeat the bill. He also struck at newspapers for failure to publicize the bill or its contents and "pretending that this is just another loyalty oath and not a blow at freedom."

Asserting that the bill was "a nefarious plot against the liberties of the people," Delacy added that "any honest man who reads this bill will be against it."

Law Teacher Passes Bar

NEW YORK, May 19—Former Harvard Law School Dean James M. Landis, after almost a quarter-century of legal scholarship, won recognition today as a qualified attorney from the state of New York.

Landis, 49, was among the 655 candidates who passed the state bar examinations. Although he started his law career in 1925 after obtaining a Harvard degree, as a clerk to the late Supreme Court Justice Louis D. Brandeis, Landis waited 23 years before taking the test.

Landis, former chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, passed his first bar examination last August in the District of Columbia. He is now associated with Former Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy.

The Cleveland convention may vote wholesale suspension of leftwing union charters, cut the element adrift and reorganize the unions under new leadership.

Murray was scheduled to drive home the final blow in his housecleaning campaign today by calling on the CIO executive board to adopt a resolution ordering the leftwing minority to "get in line with CIO policy or get out."

Fire Chieftain Shakes Finger At Youngsters

A pile of papers caused Circleville Fire Chief Talmer Wise to issue a stern warning Thursday morning.

The chief's concern was aroused when the papers, piled in the center of a barn owned by Mrs. I. B. Newton of North Court street were set on fire. The warning was directed at children who, Chief Wise believes, stacked them and applied a match.

The fire department was called to put out a blaze in the barn at 8:15 p. m. Wednesday. Chief Wise said damage was negligible.

"But it could have been very bad," he said. "Besides destroying the barn, which is a large one, the fire could have spread to surrounding structures if it had not been noticed in time.

"Fire is not a thing for kids to toy with."

But Welsh contended that the rules did not apply to committee actions, and answered only "not voting" each of the seven times his name was called.

Bernard then held up the rollcall for some 15 minutes while the sergeant-at-arms was dispatched to get a ruling either from Senate Clerk Dwight Matchette or Lt. Gov. George D. Nye, the presiding officer of the senate.

Matchette refused to enter the controversy, and Nye was unavailable. Bernard then recessed the hearing—which some of the senators said was a questionable action which might be attacked in court.

THE BILL proposes to save $6 million in administration costs over the stamp plan; $6 million on restoration of the one-cent tax bracket, and $8 million on "casual sales"—such as sales of furniture or autos by private owners—when such sales are over $100.

Even if the plan should be defeated, however, there was a new, administration bill introduced in the senate to replace one of its sections.

The measure, introduced by Majority Leader Margaret Mahoney (D-Cleveland) would eliminate the present three percent vendors' discount which last year amounted to $4 million.

It would also wipe out the present private sales tax stamp agencies, but give a one percent commission—about $1,160,000 a year—to the general funds of cities, counties or townships whose officials were tax stamp agents. At present some $600,000 a year goes to private agents as commissions.

May 7 Week's Business Shows Hike Over '48

Business in Pickaway County during the week ending May 7 was better than for the same week a year ago, although the showing for the entire year up to that date failed to reach the 1948 mark, according to a report of sales tax stamps sold here.

State Treasurer Don Ebright said sales of the stamps for the week ending May 7 amounted to $5,162.56. A year ago the figure was $3,988.32 for the same period. Collections for the year were listed as $69,786.11, a drop from last year $70,022.68.

Throughout the state automotive supplies topped the list in volume of stamps sold during the week, with $698,025.74 being listed. For the same period in 1948 the figure was given as $529,109.38.

Food, general stores, furniture, building materials and chain stores showed a drop from last year's sales, while clothing sales were up, according to the report.

Burglar Fails To Enter Office

An attempt to break into an office on the Arnold Moats used car lot of East Main street was reported by Police Chief William McCrady Thursday.

He said the attempt was made Tuesday night when someone broke a window in the office. He said the offender reached through the hole and unfastened the latch, but apparently did not enter.

Articles lying on the window ledge were undisturbed, and nothing was reported missing from the office, the chief said.

Brooklyn Blood Berls; Those Jokes About Borough Just Gotta Be Halted

NEW YORK, May 19—Brooklyn strikes back!

That is the big news today from the borough across the bridge which, with some puny aid from Texas, won World War II single-handed.

Sticks and stones may break this borough's bones, but it is the harsh yak-yak of so-called radio comedians that has at last brought to a berl the proud blood of Brooklynites from Moitle Avenue to Greenpernt.

As an answer to such joiks and for the general information of the world at large, a group of public spirited Brooklyn citizens has just published one of the most elaborate civic brochures in American municipal history.

Here, between symbolic gold covers, is proof in word and elaborate pictorial illustration that Brooklyn is a classy jernt, full of culture, tradition and high-type sensitive feelings.

* * *

UNTIL THIS brochure dropped, most people were unaware of the fact that from the very beginning Brooklyn has been a more expensive real estate development than Manhattan.

At least, it cost a lot more to buy Brooklyn from the Indians than the $24 for which the Dutch got Manhattan. The Brooklyn Indians, born realtors, sold their acreage a tract at a time, and under old agreements the Brooklyn "Lodge of Poor Lo" is still entitled to "a half interest in all the whales washed up by the winds and waves" of Jamaica Bay. As of 1949, the other half interest is lodged in the sanitation department.

From the very beginning, Brooklyn attracted a very superior class of settlers. Lady Deborah Moody moved over from England and settled there in 1643, at a time when it is doubtful if Manhattan boasted a lady of any type.

The brochure proudly points out that Ebbets Field was not always sacred to Dem Bums. Oh, Ebbets Field has had its moments, all right!

There was the time when camels and elephants shambled over its outfield in what is still pridefully regarded as the biggest—if not the best—production of Verdi's "Aida" ever produced in the New World.

Music, the brochure reports, has always been the life blood of Brooklyn. And not be-bop or juke box, either, but strictly from long hair. Indeed, this 96-page tone poem on Brooklyn has been published by the founders of the Brooklyn Symphony Orchestra, a young organization started in 1945 by a bunch of music-hungry Brooklyn GIs in the ruins of Manila.

* * *

AT $2 A COPY, the brochure is selling like gold bricks in Brooklyn, especially to former GIs who are mailing it wholesale to every point on the globe to prove to overseas acquaintances that it's true what they said about Brooklyn.

Not only is the brochure expected to spread the glad cultural tidings, but another organization is working night and day to shame the clowns who make light of Brooklyn.

The Society For The Prevention Of Disparaging Remarks About Brooklyn has just celebrated its tenth anniversary with a membership of more than 600,000 and active chapters strung from London to Hong Kong.

Sidney Ascher, a Brooklyn boy, started the SPDRB as a joke. But it is no joke to those who live in Brooklyn. Before he knew it, Ascher had a large and going brotherhood on his hands.

Ascher says there is no such thing as a Brooklyn accent, and adds that "dese, dem, deys and dose, T'oid Avenoo, erl and jernt" are common to all parts of greater New York City inhabited by the illiterati.

Members of the society are always calling up Ascher to report any new indignities heaped on Brooklyn. The Brooklyn boiling point is low, and Ascher and the society have even forced major radio programs and studios to apologize for unwarranted slurs on the beloved borough.

* * *

SOMETIMES, though, Ascher kind of wishes he could get away from it all. Not long ago, an angry Brooklyn woman called him at 3 a. m. She had been listening to a radio program about the oil business. And the commentator had said "oil, or erl, as they call it in Brooklyn."

"This woman was mad as hops," Ascher remembers, and adds sadly:

"She said to me, 'Mr. Ascher, when I heard that stupe making fun of Brooklyn, I can tell you it made my blood berl!"

Smith Plan To End Discounts

Word from a company spokesman that Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co. will in a very short time end temporary discounts of from 10 to 20 per cent on a limited number of carpet patterns, caught retailers and competitors by surprise at the weekend, it is reported. Such action might be taken late this week, although no definite date has yet been set, it is understood.

When the firm instituted the temporary discounts early in April, W. C. Hammel, vice-president in charge of sales, said the aim was to stimulate retail business by "action sales" of the patterns involved. The firm's spokesman indicates that the result has been very satisfactory. While up to now there has been no indication as to when discounts would end, Smith has maintained that the patterns would be kept in the line.

AND ANOTHER STORY -- SAME DAY

Although negotiations on wages and other benefits between the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, and some of the carpet manufacturers have broken down, it is possible a strike may be averted if talks are resumed some time this week as expected.

It was learned at the weekend that a member of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is expected to call the two groups together for further negotiation this week.

As matters stand now, some 25,000 workers in the industry are expected to strike if no settlement is reached by the time present contracts expire May 29 and 30.

The deadlock stopping negotiations came late last week after no accord could be reached on demands for a 15 cents an hour general increase for union members, the establishment of a trust fund for old-age pensions and other benefits.

Manufacturers countered by offering to extend the present contract for one year with a stipulation for reopening wages at the end of six months.

Statements from Jack Rubenstein, the union's carpet and rug director, and from the manufacturers, follows.

PRESENT CONTRACTS EXPIRE MAY 29, 30

"Negotiations between the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, and the nation's major carpet and rug companies have broken off, and a strike of some 25,000 workers in the industry is possible.

"Present contracts expire May 29 and 30, and if no settlement is reached, the plants will be closed down May 31, the first working day after the Memorial Day weekend.

"The carpet and rug companies had been notified nearly three months ago of the union's intention to seek contract improvements. A conference of delegates from local unions voted to ask a 15 cents an hour general increase and the establishment of a trust fund for old-age pensions. Another proposal was for a third week of vacation after 10 years' service.

INDUSTRY REPORTS ON NEW DEMANDS

"New wage and fringe demands have been made on the carpet industry by the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO. This, despite the patient and persevering efforts made by carpet manufacturers over the past few months to acquaint union spokesmen with the realities of the current carpet market. The demands presented would represent an estimated cost increase of approximately 20 million dollars.

"This comes at a time when the industry is doing its utmost to maintain a satisfactory level of employment, and to produce carpets at prices which the consumer can afford to pay.

The Society For The Prevention Of Disparaging Remarks About Brooklyn has just celebrated its tenth anniversary with a membership of more than 600,000 and active chapters strung from London to Hong Kong.

Sidney Ascher, a Brooklyn boy, started the SPDRB as a joke. But it is no joke to those who live in Brooklyn. Before he knew it, Ascher had a large and going brotherhood on his hands.

Ascher says there is no such thing as a Brooklyn accent, and adds that "dese, dem, deys and dose, T'oid Avenoo, erl and jernt" are common to all parts of greater New York City inhabited by the illiterati.

Members of the society are always calling up Ascher to report any new indignities heaped on Brooklyn. The Brooklyn boiling point is low, and Ascher and the society have even forced major radio programs and studios to apologize for unwarranted slurs on the beloved borough.

* * *

SOMETIMES, though, Ascher kind of wishes he could get away from it all. Not long ago, an angry Brooklyn woman called him at 3 a. m. She had been listening to a radio program about the oil business. And the commentator had said "oil, or erl, as they call it in Brooklyn."

"This woman was mad as hops," Ascher remembers, and adds sadly:

"She said to me, 'Mr. Ascher, when I heard that stupe making fun of Brooklyn, I can tell you it made my blood berl!'"

Smith Plan To End Discounts

Word from a company spokesman that Alexander Smith & Sons Carpet Co. will in a very short time end temporary discounts of from 10 to 20 per cent on a limited number of carpet patterns, caught retailers and competitors by surprise at the weekend, it is reported. Such action might be taken late this week, although no definite date has yet been set, it is understood.

When the firm instituted the temporary discounts early in April, W. C. Hammel, vice-president in charge of sales, said the aim was to stimulate retail business by "action sales" of the patterns involved. The firm's spokesman indicates that the result has been very satisfactory. While up to now there has been no indication as to when discounts would end, Smith has maintained that the patterns would be kept in the line.

AND ANOTHER STORY -- SAME DAY

Although negotiations on wages and other benefits between the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, and some of the carpet manufacturers have broken down, it is possible a strike may be averted if talks are resumed some time this week as expected.

It was learned at the weekend that a member of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service is expected to call the two groups together for further negotiation this week.

As matters stand now, some 25,000 workers in the industry are expected to strike if no settlement is reached by the time present contracts expire May 29 and 30.

The deadlock stopping negotiations came late last week after no accord could be reached on demands for a 15 cents an hour general increase for union members, the establishment of a trust fund for old-age pensions and other benefits.

Manufacturers countered by offering to extend the present contract for one year with a stipulation for reopening wages at the end of six months.

Statements from Jack Rubenstein, the union's carpet and rug director, and from the manufacturers, follows.

PRESENT CONTRACTS EXPIRE MAY 29, 30

"Negotiations between the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO, and the nation's major carpet and rug companies have broken off, and a strike of some 25,000 workers in the industry is possible.

"Present contracts expire May 29 and 30, and if no settlement is reached, the plants will be closed down May 31, the first working day after the Memorial Day weekend.

"The carpet and rug companies had been notified nearly three months ago of the union's intention to seek contract improvements. A conference of delegates from local unions voted to ask a 15 cents an hour general increase and the establishment of a trust fund for old-age pensions. Another proposal was for a third week of vacation after 10 years' service.

INDUSTRY REPORTS ON NEW DEMANDS

"New wage and fringe demands have been made on the carpet industry by the Textile Workers Union of America, CIO. This, despite the patient and persevering efforts made by carpet manufacturers over the past few months to acquaint union spokesmen with the realities of the current carpet market. The demands presented would represent an estimated cost increase of approximately 20 million dollars.

"This comes at a time when the industry is doing its utmost to maintain a satisfactory level of employment, and to produce carpets at prices which the consumer can afford to pay.

Luxurious 'Pink Palace' To Be Big 4 Parley Spot

PARIS, May 19—The Big Four foreign ministers will convene in Paris next Monday in a "pink palace" whose history is as gaudy as its rose-colored marble exterior.

The French government has selected the lavish mansion of American-born Anna Gould, daughter of American Railroad Millionaire Jay Gould, as the site for the latest session of the foreign ministers of the United States, Russia, Britain and France.

The mansion of Louis XIV style architecture has housed many an international notable in its time. Usually, however, the occasions have been of less solemn nature. The brilliant social events staged in the galleries and gardens of the "pink palace" are remembered as highlights of many a Paris social season.

It was built by Anna Gould at the turn of the century, shortly after her marriage to Boni de Castellane, who possessed the title of count along with a dash for setting styles and a remarkable faculty for dispensing money.

* * *

IN 1915, the marriage ended in a divorce which was confirmed by a Holy See annulment decree. The American heiress soon acquired a second husband and another title when she married the Duke of Talleyrand, whose family title stemmed from Napoleon's empire.

In recent years, Anna Gould has spent most of her time at her estate at Irvington-on-Hudson, New York, and the Paris mansion with its 30 bedrooms presently is occupied by the servants.

An imposing building with a U-shaped front modeled after the vast Versailles palace, the Gould mansion is a three-minute walk on broad, tree-lined Avenue Foch, from the Arc of Triomphe.

The iron-fenced entrance faces on residential Avenue Malakoff. The three wings of the mansion, with its lavish gardens, are ringed by rampart-like stone walls which should provide an easy job of security for French Surete Nationale guards assigned to protect the Big Four officials.

Once inside the iron gate, tipped with gold-painted spearheads, the four-power delegates will cross a short, white gravel stretch and then climb four white stone stairs to enter glass-paneled doors and a spacious, balconied reception hall.

* * *

A BROAD PINK marble staircase in a striking setting of high glass chandeliers and golf-leafed ceilings branches off to either side.

The delegates will be able to choose—according to inclination or political leaning—whether to climb to the conference room by the right or left staircase.

The Big Four deliberations on Germany probably will take place in the huge gallery which occupies the whole second floor of the center wing.

It is in this gallery—containing allegorical murals representing the five continents of the world—that many of the "pink palace's" most lavish affairs have been held.

THIS 'MARSHALL PLAN' HAS NO STRINGS

American Tourist On Loose Again; Europe Spreads Out Welcome Mat

NEW YORK, May 19—Happy days are here again! The great American tourist, who has been straining at the postwar leash, is on the loose.

Like a golden horde, he will roll over Europe this Summer, and he will jingle, jangle, jingle with the sweet and siren sound of the good old American dollar.

The American Express Co. estimates that as many as 350,000 American tourists, the hardiest specimens of the breed in the world, will visit Europe in 1949.

The number would total 500,000 if there were plane or ship or rocket space available. But at least 150,000 potential American tourists for Europe will have to be satisfied this Summer with South America, the West Indies, Hawaii or Canada because as of now, you couldn't get another tourist on a Europe-bound boat or plane with a shoe-horn.

* * *

SHIP accomodations have been sold out for six months. And the first conducted tours by Thomas Cook and Son have already landed and have the European situation well in hand.

The only reason that the number of Americans falling out of gondolas, off the Alps and into the black market this year will not quite reach the old prewar total is because there aren't enough vehicles to get 'em there and back.

No part of Europe, except that behind the Iron Curtain, will be safe from this peacetime AEF. Even Civil War holds no terrors for the American tourist, sublime in the belief that no European ever shoots a paying customer. So a fair number are headed this season for Greece.

In 1949, the American tourist is correct in this belief, too. For the tourist is Europe's biggest and most profitable business. As a dollar source, he is second only to the Marshall Plan and, in a way, he is nicer, since there are no strings on his dough and he hands out no blueprint for its disbursement once it leaves his careless hands.

As a result, many European countries now maintain tourist departments with virtual cabinet status. A number of European countries, where the American tourist once suspicioned that the native viewed him down the native schnozzoloa, have inaugurated widespread education programs on how to win tourists and influence spending.

"The tourist is always right" is Europe's motto. In his honor, the girls at the Follies Bergere are brushing up on the old can-can routine. The guides with the garlic accents already are on the docks, and the boys with the feelthy pitchurs are dusting off their stock and bringing it up to date.

* * *

THE 1949 TOURIST will find more soap and more towels in Europe than did the 1948 pioneer. And a lot of American tourists will get off the beaten tourist track this Summer for the simple reason that in many countries there will not be enough hotel accomodations unless the tourist is willing to see the highways and the byways as well as the glittering capitals.

It may surprise the American tourist to learn that he will be only a fraction of the European tourist trade this year. France, for example, expects 2 million tourists. Of this number, she expects only 150,000 to be Americans, 400,000 Swiss, 500,000 Belgians and 350,000 Britons.

Volume, Prices Both Drop In Livestock Sale

Prices and volume showed a decline during this week's Pickaway County Livestock Association auctions Wednesday.

A drop of 439 head was noted when only 708 were auctioned, as compared with 1,147 sold the week before.

Cattle receipts, however, showed a jump of 51 head, from the 78 sold during the previous week to 129 marketed Wednesday

A sharp decline was apparent in hog receipts, when only 450 head were auctioned this week, as compared with 950 for the week before.

Calf receipts were up, with 129 head being sold Wednesday, 48 more than the 81 sold the week before.

Sheep and lamb receipts were listed as "light."

CATTLE RECEIPTS — 129 head — Steers and heifers, good No choice cattle on sale; steers and heifers, medium to good 23-26.75-top 26.80; steers and heifers, common to medium 19-23; cows, common to good 18-21.90; cows, canners to common 14-18; bulls 17-24 top 25.40.

THIS 'MARSHALL PLAN' HAS NO STRINGS

American Tourist On Loose Again; Europe Spreads Out Welcome Mat

NEW YORK, May 19—Happy days are here again! The great American tourist, who has been straining at the postwar leash, is on the loose.

Like a golden horde, he will roll over Europe this Summer, and he will jingle, jangle, jingle with the sweet and siren sound of the good old American dollar.

The American Express Co. estimates that as many as 350,000 American tourists, the hardiest specimens of the breed in the world, will visit Europe in 1949.

The number would total 500,000 if there were plane or ship or rocket space available. But at least 150,000 potential American tourists for Europe will have to be satisfied this Summer with South America, the West Indies, Hawaii or Canada because as of now, you couldn't get another tourist on a Europe-bound boat or plane with a shoe-horn.

• • •

SHIP accomodations have been sold out for six months. And the first conducted tours by Thomas Cook and Son have already landed and have the European situation well in hand.

The only reason that the number of Americans falling out of gondolas, off the Alps and into the black market this year will not quite reach the old prewar total is because there aren't enough vehicles to get 'em there and back.

No part of Europe, except that behind the Iron Curtain, will be safe from this peacetime AEF. Even Civil War holds no terrors for the American tourist, sublime in the belief that no European ever shoots a paying customer. So a fair number are headed this season for Greece.

In 1949, the American tourist is correct in this belief, too. For the tourist is Europe's biggest and most profitable business. As a dollar source, he is second only to the Marshall Plan and, in a way, he is nicer, since there are no strings on his dough and he hands out no blueprint for its disbursement once it leaves his careless hands.

As a result, many European countries now maintain tourist departments with virtual cabinet status. A number of European countries, where the American tourist once suspicioned that the native viewed him down the native schnozzoloa, have inaugurated widespread education programs on how to win tourists and influence spending.

"The tourist is always right" is Europe's motto. In his honor, the girls at the Follies Bergere are brushing up on the old can-can routine. The guides with the garlic accents already are on the docks, and the boys with the feelthy pitchurs are dusting off their stock and bringing it up to date.

• • •

THE 1949 TOURIST will find more soap and more towels in Europe than did the 1948 pioneer. And a lot of American tourists will get off the beaten tourist track this Summer for the simple reason that in many countries there will not be enough hotel accomodations unless the tourist is willing to see the highways and the byways as well as the glittering capitals.

It may surprise the American tourist to learn that he will be only a fraction of the European tourist trade this year. France, for example, expects 2 million tourists. Of this number, she expects only 150,000 to be Americans, 400,000 Swiss, 500,000 Belgians and 350,000 Britons.

SNUBBING SPAIN

THERE has been a new swirl of agitation in Congress for immediate restoration of normal diplomatic connections with Spain, where the United States, in common with most other nations, does not have an ambassador. The argument is advanced, by some highly placed political figures, that the government of Spain is no worse than some of the others and there is no reason why Spain should be singled out for diplomatic boycott. This argument makes sense as far as it goes, but ignores the additional fact that the United Nations, in an action which was supported at the time by the United States, has refused membership to Spain and recommended that all member nations withhold ambassadors and ministers from Madrid. The United States would hardly be justified in taking an action counter to the formal position of the United Nations.

Some of the advocates of immediate appointment of an ambassador to Spain say they are interested in the principle of the thing. But the first principle this nation must uphold is compliance with United Nations declarations. Others say they are interested in Spanish business. Americans are accused of worshipping the dollar often enough, without making dollar diplomacy official. The military position of Spain is highly touted. But Spain as a military ally would be more of a liability than an asset, and the Pyrenees would be a defense line only if all the rest of Europe were abandoned.

The question of restoring full diplomatic representation at Madrid should be considered on its own merits alone, and should not be considered at all unless the position of the United Nations is reversed.

CLUBWOMEN AND DIVORCE

THE legal and moral confusion resulting from the hodge-podge of marriage and divorce laws in the United States has stirred the organized clubwomen to action.

At the recent convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Hollywood, Florida, a majority of the one thousand delegates voted in favor of uniform marriage and divorce laws. Nearly half a million divorces are granted yearly in the United States, pointed out the clubwomen. The divorced persons usually re-marry, often in another state with different laws covering these matters. The results are property mix-ups, uncertain status for husbands and wives, and most important of all, sometimes the stigma of illegitamacy on children.

The Federation, representing more than seven million energetic women, should be able to make a success of any worth-while enterprise. Their backing might prove effective in stimulating a movement for some kind of legislation to straighten out this unfortunate situation.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

There are some things that are more important than economics and politics and the marriage of Rita Hayworth. Up toward the top of the list is plain human decency. Here in my congressional district, the four candidates who had been seeking election hired sound trucks, instruments of human torture, used generally at night, when most folks want to relax and sleep.

I actually measured the noise capacity of one of these trucks by walking away from it for four blocks. Its clatter and jabber could still be heard, particularly when a female orator shrieked into the toned-up microphone. She sounded terrible.

Freedom of speech is a laudable condition, but freedom to shriek, to blast the night with foul sounds, to disturb several thousand neighbors in their homes is as much license as though this lady were to undress and march up Broadway in the nude carrying the banner with the strange device, "Vote FOR Junior." Or, for that matter, for anyone else. I suggested to a policeman that he give a sound truck a ticket because it was parked in front of a fire hydrant, but he would not interfere with freedom of speech. Park your car in that spot some day and see what happens!

Along these lines, I should like to publish a paragraph from a letter which a mother sent me:

"Last Saturday I took my 10-year-old son to the game at Braves Field to see the Braves vs Cincinnati Reds. We sat in section 'M' about seven rows behind the box seats—a perfect seat enabling us to see the game beautifully, as well as to allow my son to see his 'pals,' Dark, Torgeson, Elliott, Stanky, etc., as he had never been to a game before and only listened on the radio. In the row in front of us, right straight across were about 15 young fellows between the ages of 18-25. Each and every one of them, individually, had a pint of whisky, and yelled and taunted the players to a point where I felt like hitting them myself. The curses that they hollered out were disgusting and they bought peanuts and crackerjack, not to eat, but to throw back and forth at each other. I don't believe this should be allowed and it was disgraceful to think that my son, as well as several children around, should have to listen to such language. They (not the children) dropped and kicked their empty bottles around and delighted in the noise they made. When several men spoke to them they were curtly told to 'shuddup and mind your business.' The ushers paid absolutely no attention to them."

Of course, if the ball parks and arenas will not police themselves, decent folks can stay away from them and watch sports over television or listen to reports over the radio.

Americans are too tolerant. They let anyone get away with anything. There is no need for that. Were I at that ball park with my wife and child, I would have forced those ushers to act, even if I had to spend all afternoon finding the boss of the works to get him to do something.

He, of course, would say:

"What can I do? Those ushers belong to a union. If I say something, they'll strike."

We've taken that alibi too long, too. Maybe we ought to go on strike under the simple slogan of "decency."

SOME people have been heard to speak critically of the modern trend in automobile design, and to suggest it wouldn't hurt to go back a few years. But they would be the first to put a limit on how far the designers should go back.

THE VALLEY OF VANISHING RIDERS

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

CHIP EXPLAINED. "We're doing a special job for the governor, Rayburn—the same job that fetched Justin St. John to the Tumblerocks. Our sentence to Deer Lodge and our escape over the wall were all engineered to give us a ticket to Forlorn Valley. We've fetched a blanket pardon for the outlaws of the valley. The governor wants Forlorn thrown open to settlement."

Rayburn was now as astonished as he'd been when Chip had first unleathered his gun. Rayburn said, "Does Seton Alessandro know this? Is that why he wanted to snatch you two out of Forlorn before you had a chance to show your hand?"

Chip shook his head. "Alessandro has a personal reason for wanting us dead. But he couldn't possibly know the truth about why we came here—not unless he's a mind reader."

"But don't you see what dad's driving at?" Hope spoke up. "Alessandro's the man who stands to lose the most if the Forlorners are pardoned! The people of this valley will no longer need him if that happens. Dad, I'm beginning to see a pattern to all this! Justin St. John fetched a pardon, but Alessandro found out about it and had him killed. Then these two came on the same business, and Alessandro discovered that, too. He must have! First he tried to talk you into surrendering them to him. Failing in that, he played another card. Sheriff Busby had found St. John's body, so Alessandro schemed to pin that murder on you. Maybe he thinks that with you turned into an outlaw, you'd tear up any pardon that was presented since it wouldn't protect you. Or maybe he figures the Forlorners will stand behind you and stay outlaw, all of them. Either way, the valley would still be beyond the law and would need Alessandro—need him more than ever!"

Chip said, "That makes sense! But it doesn't explain away one fact. When I rode up to the teacherage the night of the storm, I saw you and your father come toting the body of Justin St. John outside."

Hope looked at him long and intently, and at last she said, "You're not lying, are you? You really think you saw that?"

"Of course," he said.

"But you're wrong—very wrong. If I hadn't come to know you so well these last few days, I might think you were another tool of Alessandro's. As it is, I believe you must have been delirious the night of the storm."

"I was a little out of my head," Chip conceded. "I'll admit that. Yet it all fits! Your father came to the teacherage that night; you said so yourself—admitted he left just before you found me."

"Circumstantial evidence, Chip. It's hanged more than one person."

Clark Rayburn said, "No sense in arguing about all this. And you can put up your gun, Halliday. Show me the pardon you claim you're carrying and I'll go with you to the governor."

Silently Chip passed his gun to Singin' Sam, and just as silently he seated himself and peeled off his right boot and began working at the heel of it with a knife he picked from the nearby table. Soon he'd pried a false center from the heel, and out of a small cavity he plucked a paper folded many times. "Here it is," he said, passing the paper to Rayburn. "This trick boot was left for me in a deserted ranch-house near the pen. The governor thought of everything."

Rayburn opened the paper and scanned it. Then: "I'm your prisoner," he said. "Hope, you'd better come along, too."

"Dad," she said, "do you think this is wise?"

Rayburn shrugged. "Seton Alessandro is spinning his last web, girl. Part of his plan is that I should be an outlaw—but I've got to stay holed up in Forlorn if his scheme is to work. That much I'm sure about. In a sense, I'll be breaking my given word by leaving the valley. But I can't jeopardize the other Forlorners' chance at freedom by staying here. I'll risk the mercy of the governor. There is no other choice for me, Hope."

Chip said, "You'll probably be tried for St. John's murder, Rayburn. I want you to know that I've no choice, either. I'll have to testify as to what I saw."

Rayburn smiled faintly. "You'll have time for thinking before that day comes," he said.

Chip turned to the girl, his eyes making an appeal for her understanding. "You had your own reasons for not liking me at first," he said. "Now you probably hate me. I'm sorry, Hope. You were right when you guessed that I went into this thing because it promised a heap of excitement. But now I'm remembering that I likely owe you my life... and this is the way I'm paying you back."

She came to him, laying her hand on his arm. "Maybe I was wrong about your not having both feet planted on the ground," she said. "Can you understand that I might be a little glad that I was wrong?"

He shook his head. "I can only understand that I never bargained for a deal like this when the governor gave me this job."

Rayburn coughed slightly. "We'd better be riding," he said. And Singin' Sam McAllister, wise old man, cased the gun that Chip had given him, thereby putting his trust and Chip's into the hands of Clark Rayburn.

They came out of the cabin, and Rayburn had their horses fetched to them along with a cayuse for himself. When they were mounted, Rayburn raised his voice in a shout that brought men tumbling from the cabins, and women too, and a scattering of children. Waiting until a full score of people had gathered, Rayburn looked down upon them, and Chip, seeing the bearded faces and the bonneted faces turned to the Forlorn leader in respectful attention, knew that he was witnessing a loyalty that bordered upon the magnificent.

"Folks," Rayburn announced, "I am about to break a rule of the valley by leaving and taking these people with me. I may be gone only a few days—I may be much longer than that. I can't say. But if I don't return within a couple of weeks, you'll find a paper in my cabin—a paper bearing the signature of the governor of Montana. That paper will speak for itself. I'm hoping that I can be here to present that paper to you. I'd like that."

He paused, groping for words, and his voice choked. "However the cards fall, I'll be remembering you—all of you," he said. "So long, friends. Vaya con Dios."

A murmur ran through the gathered Forlorners, but no man raised his voice in question or challenge, and Rayburn, wheeling his horse, pointed the mount southward, the three falling in behind him. Not once did Rayburn look back, but Chip saw the stiffened shoulders of this man who'd lived in Forlorn across the years and who now might be leaving the valley forever. And it came to Chip that it took a high sort of courage to do this thing that Rayburn was doing.

Soon that cluster of cabins had fallen behind them, and they were backtracking along the same trail that Chip and Singin' Sam and Hope had followed into Forlorn, skirting that flashing stream and winding through the scattered timber. They rode wordlessly, each silent with his own thoughts, but before the first mile was passed, Chip, drawing abreast of Rayburn, said, "I'm wondering if it might not be wise to wait until night. Suppose Alessandro anticipates something like this? He might be waiting beyond the pass with his men."

"I've thought of that," Rayburn said. "We won't be going through the pass."

Chip asked no questions, but he was quick to note that Rayburn soon angled abruptly to the left, leaving the trail and following a crooked course that veered steadily eastward. They splashed across the creek, and the land began tilting upward, the timber growing thicker as they neared the valley's wall. Soon the high slant was towering above them, and Chip discovered that it was not as perpendicular as it had appeared from a distance. Now Rayburn began making a search, riding first south and then north again until at last he found what he sought.

"You've all been patient," he said with a smile. "Now you'll have your reward. For you'll see something that very few people have ever seen—a secret exit from this valley. I discovered it by accident many years ago; for the sake of security I showed it to only a select few on occasions of emergency. A series of switchbacks begin here—a sort of giant stairway to the sky. They are not noticeable from the valley floor, but they will take us to the top of the wall."

"The hosses too?" Singin' Sam asked dubiously.

Rayburn nodded. "It's touchy going in some places, but just follow me."

Some say our laws will have to be changed so that a candidate for Congress will have to live in the district long enough to be familiar with it. . .say 20 minutes.

Anyhow it was exciting to watch a Roosevelt bucking the Democratic Party. It always is.

Now we can give our full attention to Phil Murray's annual drive on leftwingers in the CIO. He's reported angry enough not to take their dues but this probably is an exaggeration. That's pretty angry.

In the late Russell Maloney's delectable pot-pourri, "It's Still Maloney," he analyzed the quirk that permits laymen who would never dream of showing vulgar curiosity over the earnings of a banker or butcher to ask a writer blandly, "How much did you get for that last article?" or "How much will you make out of your new book?"

Maloney said that Alva Johnston worked out an answer that for some reason is an infallible stopper: "I get twenty-six dollars a column, but I have to pay my own expenses."

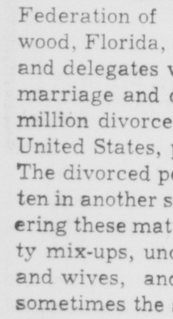
Baldwin's Senate Withdrawal Statement Angers Republicans | Scientific Outsiders Learning Many Former Atomic Secrets

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Announcement by Senator Raymond E. Baldwin (R), Connecticut, that he will accept a federal judgeship and quit the Senate caused angry rumblings behind the scenes at the GOP strategy meetings last week in Washington.

There were closed-door demands that Baldwin be chastised publicly by the Republican party.

Republicans construed his resignation as an indication that he does not believe the GOP can recapture Congress in 1950, and even fears he would be defeated for re-election by the Connecticut voters.



Senator Raymond E. Baldwin

● ATOMIC SECRETS?—Scientific outsiders are gradually learning all the former atomic secrets. They use pencil, paper and known facts. The only thing they don't know is whether their calculations are absolutely accurate. However, their mathematical conclusions can't be far wrong.

One mathematician has figured the approximate amount of atomic explosive in an A-bomb and another has computed the cost of producing electricity with atomic energy.

Some foreign countries have this "know how" but they lack the uranium and other ingredients necessary to produce an A-bomb. Canada can do both but it doesn't have the industrial plants. Outside the United States, the two big potential producers, Britain and Russia, will need from three to five years to complete all the essential steps.

* * * *

● TOO MUCH UNITY?—Louis Johnson has been Defense secretary only a few weeks and already his sincere, but roughish, moves to end the armed services' wrangling have headed him for trouble with Congress.

Each service has its devout partisans on Capitol Hill and Johnson's blunt orders stripping the Navy of power have not set well with the congressional champions of sea power.

The result may be that Johnson will have trouble getting a bill passed which would strengthen his hand in ironing out service differences.

● LABOR'S NEW DEMANDS—One prominent government labor official makes this size-up of the forthcoming new contract negotiations in the big industries—steel, coal, autos:

Demands for a fourth-round wage boost will be soft-pedaled and the emphasis will be placed on pensions, insurance benefits and welfare funds.

With the cost-of-living index down and unemployment prevailing in many sectors, labor is in none too strong a position to fight for further pay increases.

Instead, it will shift to so-called "social issues" which have big public appeal.

* * * *

● PACT PASSAGE ASSURED—Ratification of the North Atlantic Defense Pact and approval of the western European arms program are regarded on Capitol Hill as virtually certain.

Senate debate over the treaty will be long and loud but administration leaders are fully confident that there will be enough votes to pass the measure by the required two-thirds.

There will be plenty of argument over the arms plan, too, but Democratic chieftains have no fear that it will be approved.

● SENATE IN SLOW MOTION—Some Senate veterans wish that the present 81st Congress would move with some of the speed of former sessions. They are getting tired of 15-hour days and interminable debate.

A bit wistfully, they remember that the 79th Congress debated the ultra-important Atomic Energy Act during one afternoon and then passed it by voice vote.

Senators Dawdle Too Much

SNUBBING SPAIN

THERE has been a new swirl of agitation in Congress for immediate restoration of normal diplomatic connections with Spain, where the United States, in common with most other nations, does not have an ambassador. The argument is advanced, by some highly placed political figures, that the government of Spain is no worse than some of the others and there is no reason why Spain should be singled out for diplomatic boycott. This argument makes sense as far as it goes, but ignores the additional fact that the United Nations, in an action which was supported at the time by the United States, has refused membership to Spain and recommended that all member nations withhold ambassadors and ministers from Madrid. The United States would hardly be justified in taking an action counter to the formal position of the United Nations.

Some of the advocates of immediate appointment of an ambassador to Spain say they are interested in the principle of the thing. But the first principle this nation must uphold is compliance with United Nations declarations. Others say they are interested in Spanish business. Americans are accused of worshipping the dollar often enough, without making dollar diplomacy official. The military position of Spain is highly touted. But Spain as a military ally would be more of a liability than an asset, and the Pyrenees would be a defense line only if all the rest of Europe were abandoned.

The question of restoring full diplomatic representation at Madrid should be considered on its own merits alone, and should not be considered at all unless the position of the United Nations is reversed.

CLUBWOMEN AND DIVORCE

THE legal and moral confusion resulting from the hodge-podge of marriage and divorce laws in the United States has stirred the organized clubwomen to action.

At the recent convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs in Hollywood, Florida, a majority of the one thousand delegates voted in favor of uniform marriage and divorce laws. Nearly half a million divorces are granted yearly in the United States, pointed out the clubwomen. The divorced persons usually re-marry, often in another state with different laws covering these matters. The results are property mix-ups, uncertain status for husbands and wives, and most important of all, sometimes the stigma of illegitamacy on children.

The Federation, representing more than seven million energetic women, should be able to make a success of any worth-while enterprise. Their backing might prove effective in stimulating a movement for some kind of legislation to straighten out this unfortunate situation.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

There are some things that are more important than economics and politics and the marriage of Rita Hayworth. Up toward the top of the list is plain human decency. Here in my congressional district, the four candidates who had been seeking election hired sound trucks, instruments of human torture, used generally at night, when most folks want to relax and sleep.

I actually measured the noise capacity of one of these trucks by walking away from it for four blocks. Its clatter and jabber could still be heard, particularly when a female orator shrieked into the toned-up microphone. She sounded terrible.

Freedom of speech is a laudable condition, but freedom to shriek, to blast the night with foul sounds, to disturb several thousand neighbors in their homes is as much license as though this lady were to undress and march up Broadway in the nude carrying the banner with the strange device, "Vote FOR Junior." Or, for that matter, for anyone else. I suggested to a policeman that he give a sound truck a ticket because it was parked in front of a fire hydrant, but he would not interfere with freedom of speech. Park your car in that spot some day and see what happens!

Along these lines, I should like to publish a paragraph from a letter which a mother sent me:

"Last Saturday I took my 10-year-old son to the game at Braves Field to see the Braves vs Cincinnati Reds. We sat in section 'M' about seven rows behind the box seats—a perfect seat enabling us to see the game beautifully, as well as to allow my son to see his 'pals,' Dark, Torgeson, Elliott, Stanky, etc., as he had never been to a game before and only listened on the radio. In the row in front of us, right straight across were about 15 young fellows between the ages of 18-25. Each and every one of them, individually, had a pint of whisky, and yelled and taunted the players to a point where I felt like hitting them myself. The curses that they hollered out were disgusting and they bought peanuts and crackerjack, not to eat, but to throw back and forth at each other. I don't believe this should be allowed and it was disgraceful to think that my son, as well as several children around, should have to listen to such language. They (not the children) dropped and kicked their empty bottles around and delighted in the noise they made. When several men spoke to them they were curtly told to 'shuddup and mind your business.' The ushers paid absolutely no attention to them."

Of course, if the ball parks and arenas will not police themselves, decent folks can stay away from them and watch sports over television or listen to reports over the radio.

Americans are too tolerant. They let anyone get away with anything. There is no need for that. Were I at that ball park with my wife and child, I would have forced those ushers to act, even if I had to spend all afternoon finding the boss of the works to get him to do something.

He, of course, would say:

"What can I do? Those ushers belong to a union. If I say something, they'll strike."

We've taken that alibi too long, too. Maybe we ought to go on strike under the simple slogan of "decency."

SOME people have been heard to speak critically of the modern trend in automobile design, and to suggest it wouldn't hurt to go back a few years. But they would be the first to put a limit on how far the designers should go back.

THE VALLEY OF VANISHING RIDERS

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

CHIP EXPLAINED. "We're doing a special job for the governor, Rayburn—the same job that fetched Justin St. John to the Tumblerocks. Our sentence to Deer Lodge and our escape over the wall were all engineered to give us a ticket to Forlorn Valley. We've fetched a blanket pardon for the outlaws of the valley. The governor wants Forlorn thrown open to settlement."

Rayburn was now as astonished as he'd been when Chip had first unleathered his gun. Rayburn said, "Does Seton Alessandro know this? Is that why he wanted to snatch you two out of Forlorn before you had a chance to show your hand?"

Chip shook his head. "Alessandro has a personal reason for wanting us dead. But he couldn't possibly know the truth about why we came here—not unless he's a mind reader."

"But don't you see what dad's driving at?" Hope spoke up. "Alessandro's the man who stands to lose the most if the Forlorners are pardoned! The people of this valley will no longer need him if that happens. Dad, I'm beginning to see a pattern to all this! Justin St. John fetched a pardon, but Alessandro found out about it and had him killed. Then these two came on the same business, and Alessandro discovered that, too. He must have! First he tried to talk you into surrendering them to him. Failing in that, he played another card. Sheriff Busby had found St. John's body, so Alessandro schemed to pin that murder on you. Maybe he thinks that with you turned into an outlaw, you'd tear up any pardon that was presented since it wouldn't protect you. Or maybe he figures the Forlorners will stand behind you and stay outlaw, all of them. Either way, the valley would still be beyond the law and would need Alessandro—need him more than ever!"

Chip said, "That makes sense! But it doesn't explain away one fact. When I rode up to the teacherage the night of the storm, I saw you and your father come toting the body of Justin St. John outside."

Hope looked at him long and intently, and at last she said, "You're not lying, are you? You really think you saw that?"

"Of course," he said.

"But you're wrong—very wrong. If I hadn't come to know you so well these last few days, I might think you were another tool of Alessandro's. As it is, I believe you must have been delirious the night of the storm."

"I was a little out of my head," Chip conceded. "I'll admit that. Yet it all fits! Your father came to the teacherage that night; you said so yourself—admitted he left just before you found me."

"Circumstantial evidence, Chip. It's hanged more than one person."

Clark Rayburn said, "No sense in arguing about all this. And you can put up your gun, Halliday. Show me the pardon you claim you're carrying and I'll go with you to the governor."

Silently Chip passed his gun to Singin' Sam, and just as silently he seated himself and peeled off his right boot and began working at the heel of it with a knife he picked from the nearby table. Soon he'd pried a false center from the heel, and out of a small cavity he plucked a paper folded many times. "Here it is," he said, passing the paper to Rayburn. "This trick boot was left for me in a deserted ranch-house near the pen. The governor thought of everything."

Rayburn opened the paper and scanned it. Then: "I'm your prisoner," he said. "Hope, you'd better come along, too."

"Dad," she said, "do you think this is wise?"

Rayburn shrugged. "Seton Alessandro is spinning his last web, girl. Part of his plan is that I should be an outlaw—but I've got to stay holed up in Forlorn if his scheme is to work. That much I'm sure about. In a sense, I'll be breaking my given word by leaving the valley. But I can't jeopardize the other Forlorners' chance at freedom by staying here. I'll risk the mercy of the governor. There is no other choice for me, Hope."

Chip said, "You'll probably be tried for St. John's murder, Rayburn. I want you to know that I've no choice, either. I'll have to testify as to what I saw."

Rayburn smiled faintly. "You'll have time for thinking before that day comes," he said.

Chip turned to the girl, his eyes making an appeal for her understanding. "You had your own reasons for not liking me at first," he said. "Now you probably hate me. I'm sorry, Hope. You were right when you guessed that I went into this thing because it promised a heap of excitement. But now I'm remembering that I likely owe you my life... and this is the way I'm paying you back."

She came to him, laying her hand on his arm. "Maybe I was wrong about your not having both feet planted on the ground," she said. "Can you understand that I might be a little glad that I was wrong?"

He shook his head. "I can only understand that I never bargained for a deal like this when the governor gave me this job."

Rayburn coughed slightly. "We'd better be riding," he said. And Singin' Sam McAllister, wise old man, cased the gun that Chip had given him, thereby putting his trust and Chip's into the hands of Clark Rayburn.

They came out of the cabin, and Rayburn had their horses fetched to them along with a cayuse for himself. When they were mounted, Rayburn raised his voice in a shout that brought men tumbling from the cabins, and women too, and a scattering of children. Waiting until a full score of people had gathered, Rayburn looked down upon them, and Chip, seeing the bearded faces and the bonneted faces turned to the Forlorn leader in respectful attention, knew that he was witnessing a loyalty that bordered upon the magnificent.

"Folks," Rayburn announced, "I am about to break a rule of the valley by leaving and taking these people with me. I may be gone only a few days—I may be much longer than that. I can't say. But if I don't return within a couple of weeks, you'll find a paper in my cabin—a paper bearing the signature of the governor of Montana. That paper will speak for itself. I'm hoping that I can be here to present that paper to you. I'd like that."

He paused, groping for words, and his voice choked. "However the cards fall, I'll be remembering you—all of you," he said. "So long, friends. Vaya con Dios."

A murmur ran through the gathered Forlorners, but no man raised his voice in question or challenge, and Rayburn, wheeling his horse, pointed the mount southward, the three falling in behind him. Conservatives See Trend In Polls

LONDON, May 19 — A quiet but firm conviction that the Laborite movement in Great Britain has "shot its bolt" is being expressed here today, and political experts are predicting a conservative victory in the general elections that will be held next year.

The viewpoint is based first upon tremendous Tory gains in the London County council balloting, and secondly upon rural and municipal elections throughout the United Kingdom which resulted in similar gains.

Sunk in a deep minority since 1945, the Conservatives came out of the London council elections with precisely the same number of seats as those held by the Labor Party.

In the countrywide vote, the Conservatives piled up a net gain of 805 legislative seats as against a net loss of 715 for Labor Party candidates.

Conservative Party spokesmen describe this turnover as "overwhelming."

They compare it in terms of par with the voting that sent Winston Churchill out of office as prime minister immediately after the end of the war and installed Clement Attlee as his successor.

Labor spokesmen are significantly silent.

They have said only that the Conservatives failed to put forth a truly constructive program and confined themselves to a campaign of "unsettling" the situation by "unmerited" criticism.

It surely is noteworthy that while a few months ago Communism as a political creed was accepted without question in England, not a single Communist candidate managed to find himself a desk and seat in the countrywide council elections.

3 County Pupils Get Certificates

Three Pickaway County eighth graders received special certificates of achievement Wednesday for their high grades in the recent state eighth year test.

Charlie Hardin of Pickaway Township led the list in receiving the awards, while Carl O'Hara of Saltcreek Township and Richard Smith of Madison followed. Hardin scored 178 on the exam, while O'Hara and Smith tied at 166.

The certificates were issued by the state department to the three youngsters for ranking in the upper one percent of the state.

Williamsport Alumni To Meet

Williamsport high school's 54th annual Alumni banquet is to be held at 6:30 p. m. Saturday in Sulphur Springs Pavilion.

The banquet is to be served by the Women's Society of Christian Service of Williamsport Methodist church. William Garrison of Covington, Ky., member of the class of 1925, will act as toastmaster.

Round and square dancing will follow the banquet.

The viewpoint is based first upon tremendous Tory gains in the London County council balloting, and secondly upon rural and municipal elections throughout the United Kingdom which resulted in similar gains.

Sunk in a deep minority since 1945, the Conservatives came out of the London council elections with precisely the same number of seats as those held by the Labor Party.

In the countrywide vote, the Conservatives piled up a net gain of 805 legislative seats as against a net loss of 715 for Labor Party candidates.

Conservative Party spokesmen describe this turnover as "overwhelming."

They compare it in terms of par with the voting that sent Winston Churchill out of office as prime minister immediately after the end of the war and installed Clement Attlee as his successor.

Labor spokesmen are significantly silent.

They have said only that the Conservatives failed to put forth a truly constructive program and confined themselves to a campaign of "unsettling" the situation by "unmerited" criticism.

It surely is noteworthy that while a few months ago Communism as a political creed was accepted without question in England, not a single Communist candidate managed to find himself a desk and seat in the countrywide council elections.

3 County Pupils Get Certificates

Three Pickaway County eighth graders received special certificates of achievement Wednesday for their high grades in the recent state eighth year test.

Charlie Hardin of Pickaway Township led the list in receiving the awards, while Carl O'Hara of Saltcreek Township and Richard Smith of Madison followed. Hardin scored 178 on the exam, while O'Hara and Smith tied at 166.

The certificates were issued by the state department to the three youngsters for ranking in the upper one percent of the state.

Big 4 Meet Agenda Holds Problems

PARIS, May 19—The extremely difficult problem of framing an agenda for the Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers' meeting slated to assemble here next Monday claimed the full attention of the United States, Great Britain and France today.

It is made so hard simply by the fact that Soviet Russia is not represented at the preliminary deliberations in the French capital.

To this is added another complication: The fact that there still is some doubt in the minds of the Western Allies as to Russia's real sincerity in carrying out fully the terms under which the blockade of Berlin was lifted.

If the Russians are violating the blockade-lifting conditions, it should be no great task to confront them with the allegation and proof of it.

If they agreed to the Big Four meeting under false pretenses and are planning to use it merely as a propaganda sounding board, there need be no time lost in making world opinion cognizant of the fact.

The Berlin Airlift, which in the first and last analysis broke the back of the blockade, is continuing. British Foreign Secretary Bevin, describing himself as an old-time trade unionist, told the House of Commons:

"I never call off a strike fund until I am sure there will be no victimization."

The chances are strong that this is to be the general viewpoint of the Allies when they meet in Anna Gould's "Pink Palace" on the Avenue Foch. And if it is, the Russians may find themselves in the unexpected position of offering terms rather than demanding them.

The gray whale spends the Summer in Bering sea and northward, and in Autumn returns southward where the female enters a southern California bay to produce her young.

New Farm Plan To Scrap Old Price Parity Deal

WASHINGTON, May 19—Congressional leaders have received the administration's new farm bill proposing to scrap the old parity price formula for supporting farm commodities.

The measure, which would become effective Jan. 1, 1950, substitutes instead an income support standard and gives priority for support to a revised list of commodities.

Under the income support standards, farmers theoretically would receive enough to bring their income up to the level of their average annual purchasing power from cash receipts during the first ten of the preceding 12 years.

The revised list of priority commodities includes corn, cotton, wheat, tobacco, whole milk, eggs, chickens, hogs, beef cattle, and lambs.

* * *

THIS ELIMINATES peanuts and rice which are on the present list of so-called basic commodities eligible for support at 90 percent of parity.

The proposed bill was sent to House Speaker Rayburn by Agriculture Secretary Brannan. It follows closely along the lines discussed by Brannan in recent testimony before the House Agriculture Committee.

It would authorize the secretary through the Commodity Credit Corp., to carry out support operations by means of loans, purchase agreements, outright purchases of commodities, and production payments (subsidies) to farmers.

In general, loans and purchases agrements would be available for storage crops as at present while production payments would be made on perishables.

It is this feature of the proposal which has met the strongest criticism on Capitol Hill.

Some Republicans insist that production payment on milk alone would amount to about $2 billion a year.

Brannan has made no overall estimate of the cost of the plan, but he insists that it would be less expensive than the present system or the sliding scale of supports which is scheduled to become effective Jan. 1 under the Republican-passed Aiken-Hope bill.

The administration measure carried authorfty for the secretary to withhold support from any producer who fails to comply with acreage allotments, marketing quotas or other limitations voted by a majority of producers.

New Farm Plan To Scrap Old Price Parity Deal

WASHINGTON, May 19—Congressional leaders have received the administration's new farm bill proposing to scrap the old parity price formula for supporting farm commodities.

The measure, which would become effective Jan. 1, 1950, substitutes instead an income support standard and gives priority for support to a revised list of commodities.

Under the income support standards, farmers theoretically would receive enough to bring their income up to the level of their average annual purchasing power from cash receipts during the first ten of the preceding 12 years.

The revised list of priority commodities includes corn, cotton, wheat, tobacco, whole milk, eggs, chickens, hogs, beef cattle, and lambs.

THIS ELIMINATES peanuts and rice which are on the present list of so-called basic commodities eligible for support at 90 percent of parity.

The proposed bill was sent to House Speaker Rayburn by Agriculture Secretary Brannan. It follows closely along the lines discussed by Brannan in recent testimony before the House Agriculture Committee.

SOMETHING FROM ABOVE BRINGS HOPE

Paraplegics Get New Chance In Gotham Training Center

NEW YORK, May 19—Probably most Americans never heard the word "paraplegic" before World War II. Then, suddenly, it had an all too familiar ring and with it the sad connotation of helpless and hopeless invalidism.

But the age of miracles has taken over a relatively small, quiet New York building in East Thirty-Eighth Street and paraplegics are being taught to walk, to take care of their bodily needs and, in many cases, to return to parttime and even fulltime employment.

Within one year after its establishment, the Institute of Rehabilitation and Physical Medicine, conducted by New York university's Bellevue Medical Center, has become a haven of hope for men, women and children crippled by automobile and industrial accidents or wasting disease.

It is a lamp in the dark for the thousands of Americans who are permanently injured every year in civilian accidents. The appalling annual civilian total is higher than the number of Americans injured in almost four years of global fighting in World War II.

MORE THAN 800 persons have been treated at the institute since its inauguration. Of this number, 100 have been paraplegic miners, their backs broken, sent to the institute by mine union welfare funds.

Ninety-five of this group were taught to walk again, although the men had been bed-ridden for periods varying from six months to 15 years. About 80 percent of these men are now gainfully employed once more, either at part or fulltime jobs.

Two of the pretty young secretaries at the institute were "hopeless" paraplegics, bed-ridden for years, before they came to the haven for treatment. Now both get around on crutches and, to the joy of each, is independent and able to earn a living. Both were injured in auto accidents.

Another fulltime employe of the institute is a slim young man who lost both hands in a factory accident a few years ago. He was brought to the institute in such blank despair that his family feared he would kill himself at any moment.

Today he is almost as accomplished with hooks as other men with hands. He stays on at the institute as an instructor and, once more able to earn a living for his wife and two children, is a happy and well adjusted individual.

He is even able to take off and put on the artificial arms and the complicated harness that goes with them.

A five-story building crowded with men and women learning to walk on their own once-useless limbs and with others learning to use artificial arms and legs would not ordinarily be regarded as a repository of good cheer and gaiety.

But every face at the institute was animated by cheer and happiness, and by something above and beyond both—by hope.

SOMETHING FROM ABOVE BRINGS HOPE

Paraplegics Get New Chance In Gotham Training Center

NEW YORK, May 19—Probably most Americans never heard the word "paraplegic" before World War II. Then, suddenly, it had an all too familiar ring and with it the sad connotation of helpless and hopeless invalidism.

But the age of miracles has taken over a relatively small, quiet New York building in East Thirty-Eighth Street and paraplegics are being taught to walk, to take care of their bodily needs and, in many cases, to return to parttime and even fulltime employment.

Within one year after its establishment, the Institute of Rehabilitation and Physical Medicine, conducted by New York university's Bellevue Medical Center, has become a haven of hope for men, women and children crippled by automobile and industrial accidents or wasting disease.

It is a lamp in the dark for the thousands of Americans who are permanently injured every year in civilian accidents. The appalling annual civilian total is higher than the number of Americans injured in almost four years of global fighting in World War II.

MORE THAN 800 persons have been treated at the institute since its inauguration. Of this number, 100 have been paraplegic miners, their backs broken, sent to the institute by mine union welfare funds.

Ninety-five of this group were taught to walk again, although the men had been bed-ridden for periods varying from six months to 15 years. About 80 percent of these men are now gainfully employed once more, either at part or fulltime jobs.

Two of the pretty young secretaries at the institute were "hopeless" paraplegics, bed-ridden for years, before they came to the haven for treatment. Now both get around on crutches and, to the joy of each, is independent and able to earn a living. Both were injured in auto accidents.

Another fulltime employe of the institute is a slim young man who lost both hands in a factory accident a few years ago. He was brought to the institute in such blank despair that his family feared he would kill himself at any moment.

Today he is almost as accomplished with hooks as other men with hands. He stays on at the institute as an instructor and, once more able to earn a living for his wife and two children, is a happy and well adjusted individual.

He is even able to take off and put on the artificial arms and the complicated harness that goes with them.

A five-story building crowded with men and women learning to walk on their own once-useless limbs and with others learning to use artificial arms and legs would not ordinarily be regarded as a repository of good cheer and gaiety.

But every face at the institute was animated by cheer and happiness, and by something above and beyond both—by hope.

UNCLE JOE 'WANTS PEACE'

Russia Sees Hope Ahead In Conference Of Big 4

MOSCOW, May 19—The Soviet publication New Times has declared that the forthcoming Paris conference of the Big Four "could become a turning point in the course of postwar settlement."

But, while making the most optimistic Soviet comment yet on the present international situation, the publication quickly added that the West is to blame for failure to solve the German question thus far.

New Times said that the Council of Foreign Ministers meeting Monday "gives rise to definite hopes in the hearts of ordinary people of the whole world who wish to celebrate the fifth anniversary of victory over Hitlerite Germany with the successful completion of a European settlement."

Asserting that the German question could well be solved at the Big Four meeting, New Times said:

"If the council meeting fails, it will not be the fault of Russia."

* * *

IT ADDED that Russia three times took the initiative in attempting to settle the problem of the Berlin blockade.

The first attempt, it said, came with the Moscow talks between Vyacheslav Molotov and the Western ambassadors last Summer.

The second attempt, New Times continued, came with Stalin's declaration to a Pravda correspondent in October, 1948. In that interview, Stalin blamed the West for "violating" the ambassadors agreement on the Berlin currency issue, and accused the West of following a "war policy."

The third attempt, New Times said, was in the exchange of telegrams with Kingsbury Smith of INS which resulted in the New York talks of the Big Four that brought the end of the blockade and a new meeting of the foreign ministers.

New Times added that Stalin had also written to Argentine Foreign Minister Juan Bramuglia when, as president of the UN Security Council, Bramuglia was striving to secure a compromise on the Berlin blockade. It concluded:

"The Soviet Union has ceaselessly demonstrated its good will and its desire to reach the quickest decision."

Western Powers Are Set For Showdown With Soviet

PARIS, May 19 — Highly authoritative diplomatic sources in Paris have disclosed today the West plans to take the initiative in next week's Big Four talks and call for a showdown with Russia over German unity.

Preliminary discussions in Paris between American, British and French diplomatic experts still are being held in the strictest secrecy but a general outline of Western grand strategy has leaked out.

Details of this strategy are being formulated by U. S. Ambassador-at-Large Philip C. Jessup, British Permanent Undersecretary for German Affairs Sir Ivone Kirkpatrick, Alexandre Parodi, secretary-general of the French foreign office. Their plans may result in one of the most fateful international conferences in history.

The planners have agreed to call Russia's propaganda pose as the champion of German unity, by asking the Russians point-blank if they are willing to consider the West's two primary conditions for agreement on German unity. These are:

1. Application to Soviet-controlled Eastern Germany of the principles of the newly-adopted Bonn constitution for Western Germany, especially the guarantees of basic human rights and civil liberties.

2. Holding of free elections under the strictest international supervision throughout Germany, including the Soviet zone.

* * *

THE PLANNERS believe that Soviet Foreign Minister Vishinsky's reaction to these two fundamental proposals will quickly show whether there is any hope of agreement with Russia at this conference for general settlement of the German problem.

The three have decided that the Western foreign ministers should attempt to come to grips speedily with Vishinsky over the basic issues involved in the question of German unity.

They believe this should be done as soon as possible after the conference gets underway next Monday.

They have agreed that the West should present a united front demanding that these basic issues be the first items on the agenda of the conference rather than the question of the settlement of the Berlin problem.

This decision was reached both for political and practical purposes.

They pointed out that a different approach to the settlement of the Berlin problem will have to be made if there is no general settlement of the German problem as a whole.

The Western Powers are convinced that Vishinsky is coming to Paris with instructions to make Russia appear in the role of chief champion of German unity.

* * *

IN ORDER to forestall such a propaganda maneuver, the planners have agreed that their foreign ministers should immediately call Russia's bluff by demanding the Soviets answer whether they are willing to consider the West's two primary conditions for agreement on German unity.

The Western planners believe that if Vishinsky indicates Russia's willingness to accept the two primary points, Western diplomats consider it would be an event of stupendous political importance.

Solicitor Says Check Is Made On Alleys Here

City Solicitor George Gerhardt has reported to the city fathers on the condition of an alley from Weldon avenue to Washington street.

Gerhardt was instructed to check on the condition of the alley during a previous council meeting. His findings were:

"I drove through the alley, and while it is awfully rough going, it is possible to get through."

The city solicitor also reported on paving an alley between Pickaway and Washington streets. He explained that the alley, the last one before the corporation line, is privately owned.

"Unless the owners agree to deed it over to the city, there is nothing we can do about paving it," he said.

He added that he had offered to prepare the deed, but had not heard from the owners.

NEWS VIEWS

BY JOE MOATS

A Professor of Surgery at Northwestern University claims that humans would avoid troubles if they went about on all fours. Standing erect, he says, is as wrong as a picture of Groucho Marx on a $10 bill. The human skeleton is patterned along the same lines as four-footed animals, and when we insist on doing tricks like standing on our hind legs it puts strains on the lower back, the lower abdomen and the feet. Well, the Prof has an argument that's as unanswerable as an echo, and most of us have the aches to prove it. Most of us won't see eye to eye with him. . . unless we get down on all fours.

Rev. D. E. Clay, pastor of the local Church of the Nazarene announced that construction of the new parsonage is being started thanks to the success of the "Bushel of Pennies" drive. Of course those pennies can't pay for the entire project so any donations of building supplies or materials will be greatly welcomed by the church.

California legislators voted against letting school teachers spank students. Apparently they figured the teachers were working on the wrong end. Your car takes a beating every mile you drive. . .so let us keep it in shape with regular check-ups and service at JOE MOATS MOTOR SALES, 159 E. Franklin St. Everybody's talking about the way we straighten crooked, off-balance wheels that cause wear and tear on tires and steering mechanism. Our experienced wheel men, working with modern equipment will take the jitters out of your wheels. Phone 301.

NEWS VIEWS

BY JOE MOATS

A Professor of Surgery at Northwestern University claims that humans would avoid troubles if they went about on all fours. Standing erect, he says, is as wrong as a picture of Groucho Marx on a $10 bill. The human skeleton is patterned along the same lines as four-footed animals, and when we insist on doing tricks like standing on our hind legs it puts strains on the lower back, the lower abdomen and the feet. Well, the Prof has an argument that's as unanswerable as an echo, and most of us have the aches to prove it. Most of us won't see eye to eye with him. . . unless we get down on all fours.

Rev. D. E. Clay, pastor of the local Church of the Nazarene announced that construction of the new parsonage is being started thanks to the success of the "Bushel of Pennies" drive. Of course those pennies can't pay for the entire project so any donations of building supplies or materials will be greatly welcomed by the church.

California legislators voted against letting school teachers spank students. Apparently they figured the teachers were working on the wrong end. Your car takes a beating every mile you drive. . .so let us keep it in shape with regular check-ups and service at JOE MOATS MOTOR SALES, 159 E. Franklin St. Everybody's talking about the way we straighten crooked, off-balance wheels that cause wear and tear on tires and steering mechanism. Our experienced wheel men, working with modern equipment will take the jitters out of your wheels. Phone 301.

Majors' 1st Month Ends With Predictions Ignored

NE'V YORK, May 19 — Two major league pennant races hit that first-month milestone today in a 5½-month trek leading to the annual October payoff—but nobody was any the wiser for the fact that approximately a fifth of the season was out of the way.

Indeed, if anything at all was proved, it was this: No opening month of the last 34 years had been quite its equal for complete, free-style, nonpartisan horseplay.

Take a gander, for instance, at the current National League standing which, as an instance, shows the supposedly "pitiful" Cincinnati Reds only one game out of first place. Not just hanging on desperately at this stage, either.

They're actually carrying the fight to the top two in a manner no Cincinnati club has shown since the old 1919 champions—the manner of Grady Hatton's grand-slam homer in the ninth yesterday for a 13-9 victory over the Braves.

* * *

IT'S TOO EARLY, and '49 baseball has been too nonsensical, to accept the Reds as definite contenders. But this much is clear:

Either the Reds are much better than anybody expected—or the champion Braves are worse. Yesterday's win, for example, was their second straight over Boston, their third in four games this year.

On Tuesday, they knocked off Warren Spahn, top left-hander. Yesterday, they staked 24-game winner Johnny Sain to four runs, then gave him the "business."

Maybe the Reds are due for a dive, maybe they're just getting by on the inspirational touch of Manager Bucky Walters.

Even so, no club pins back the ears of the league's best one-two pitching punch in successive games without having something beside the right idea. Anyhow, here's a tip for what it may be worth:

Don't laugh off the Reds—or any club on the "major" time this year—at least, until the joke gets to its point.

Meanwhile, there was nothing funny about the last two days for either the Giants or Braves. Tied at the top, they started confidently into the league's westwing Tuesday, and promptly went oh-for-two, the Giants blowing another, 5-3, to sound Pirate pitching.

Right now, the thing is getting the old see-saw stuff in both leagues. The Dodgers, winning another from the last-place Cubs 14-5, have scored 22 runs in two days, and are on their way up again. Last week, they couldn't beat anybody.

* * *

MEANTIME, take the Phillies—they've cleaned up a total of eight out of 10 from the Dodgers and Cardinals to date. And they've only won 13, all told. Incidentally, they made it two straight over the moribund Cards yesterday, 3-2.

Equally confusing is an American League situation, which finds the two favorites—Boston and Cleveland—running a respective 6-7 in the official standing.

Yesterday, the champion Indians lost their fifth straight, and suffered their fifth shutout in the last eight games, in being knocked off, 6-0, by the Yankees and Vic Raschi's two-hitter. Likewise, Tommy Henrich's two-homer day at the expense of a new non-potent Bob Feller.

It was Cleveland's low-ebb of two seasons. No lower, though, than were last week's Red Sox who, with yesterday's 7-4 decision over Chicago, are beginning to show symptoms of restored sanity.

The Yanks are riding high again, three games in front to themselves—and ex-Indian Ed Robinson, who belted his seventh homer last night in the eighth inning with two on to give the Senators a 6-3 win, and take the second-place Tigers down a peg.

Until Robinson did his stuff, the Tigers almost won against Paul Calvert and others with only one hit—which didn't even figure in their scoring.

Another homer, Sherman Loller's, came with two on in the sixth at Philadelphia to give the Browns an 8-6 victory over the Athletics.

Uncle Mike Jacobs' Hold On Boxing Has Slipped

NEW YORK, May 19 — The crack-up of Mike Jacobs' 20th Century Sporting Club—most successful enterprise of its kind—set in formally today when Al Weill moved into Madison Square Garden as matchmaker.

The roly-poly veteran of 35 years in the boxing business will take over duties shared by Nat Rogers and Tex Sullivan.

Others of lesser prominence are being moved out as the International Boxing Club and the Garden consolidate their forces to complete what undoubtedly will be the greatest boxing monopoly of all time.

The 20th Century will hang on for a time as a sort of partner on the outer fringe of things, and gradually will be absorbed—thus marking the passing of a tremendous organization.

* *

THERE WASN'T anything Jacobs couldn't do as a promoter better than any other promoter this country has ever seen. On top of it all, he was using his own money. Tex Rickard was supposed to be terrific, but he gambled with other people's money, including Uncle Mike's.

Weill was matchmaker for Mike when the old promoter hit the big time with his 20th Century Sporting Club in the early 1930s, but they didn't last long together. Weill went on about his business as manager of Lou Ambers.

He has handled scores of fighters and served as matchmaker and promoter in many places.

According to his colleagues he has made and put away more money than almost any other half dozen guys in the business.

Strange as it may seem to any one not connected with the peculiar, sometimes baffling, prizefight business, he is proud of his long career in various capacities around the ring.

"For 35 years I've been in it without a break," he said, like a man recounting a long reign as a business tycoon.

Club Here Seeks Photographs Of Old Grid Teams

Circleville high school halls may be decorated by framed photographs of former football teams next Fall.

The high school Stooge Club has elected to ferret out early Circleville football pictures and have them hung in the halls during the 1949-50 school year.

Robert McAllister, spokesman for the athletic organization, said the club has pictures dating back through 1942, and has one picture of the 1912 team. However, no photos of the teams between 1912 and 1942, and earlier teams, have been found to date.

The Stooges are asking persons having a print of an early team to turn it in to the high school before the end of this school year, so that copies may be made and framed.

McAllister said the original pictures would not be harmed in any way.

Fall Date Set For Olympics

NEW YORK, May 19—International Olympic President J. Sigfrid Edstrom disclosed today that an unprecedented October date had been chosen for the showing of the 1956 Olympic games in Melbourne, Australia.

The shift from midSummer to Autumn, Dr. Edstrom explained, was made necessary by Australia's "reverse" seasonal changes, adding:

"My thought is that the Olympic games should not be considered strictly from the standpoint of the United States and Europe. I hope some Americans will be able to compete in Melbourne."

Williamsport Chalks Up 3rd Softball Win

Williamsport softball team racked up its third win in as many starts this season by handing Ashville a 5-1 lacing in Ted Lewis Park Wednesday night.

The Williamsport win was highlighted by two round-trip hits, although the bases were empty at the time. 'Bub" Shaw poled the first four-baser in the fifth frame, and Paul Schein duplicated the feat in the next inning.

Ashville's lone tally was registered in the third inning on a walk, stolen base, passed ball and a single.

This week's Circleville Night Softball League card will be completed Thursday night when VFW plays Hoovers. Gametime is 8 p. m.

Walnut Law Nabs Roosevelt Pace

WESTBURY, N. Y., May 19—The featured California Pace at Roosevelt Raceway last night was taken by Walnut Law, eight-year-old brown gelding owned by the Happy Valley Farm and driven by Robert Walker.

Starting from the rail post position, Walnut Law took an early lead in the $1,500 race and maintained the advantage across the wire one length ahead of the favored Willina Hanover. Rust Hanover placed third three lengths behind the leader.

How Often Should You Change Motor Oil

In almost every car the answer is different. It depends on weather conditions, temperature changes, on the nature of the motor oil in use, on the manner in which you drive your car.

The need for an oil change further depends on the condition of your engine and many other factors.

In general, moisture condensation due to atmospheric conditions and motors cooling off, plus road dust and dirt that filters from the highway creates sludge which should be drained off.

Tiny particles of grit and metal which collect in the crankcase pan are dangerous. These should be removed at regular intervals. Through constant checking and testing, Fleet-Wing has come to the conclusion, to be on the safe side, motorists should change motor oil every 1000 miles. If you do, your car will run better, last longer, and repair bills will be held to a minimum. Remember—good motor oil is cheap insurance.

Majors' 1st Month Ends With Predictions Ignored

NEW YORK, May 19 — Two major league pennant races hit that first-month milestone today in a 5½-month trek leading to the annual October payoff—but nobody was any the wiser for the fact that approximately a fifth of the season was out of the way.

Indeed, if anything at all was proved, it was this: No opening month of the last 34 years had been quite its equal for complete, free-style, non-partisan horseplay.

Take a gander, for instance, at the current National League standing which, as an instance, shows the supposedly "pitiful" Cincinnati Reds only one game out of first place. Not just hanging on desperately at this stage, either.

They're actually carrying the fight to the top two in a manner no Cincinnati club has shown since the old 1919 champions—the manner of Grady Hatton's grand-slam homer in the ninth yesterday for a 13-9 victory over the Braves.

• • •

IT'S TOO EARLY, and '49 baseball has been too nonsensical, to accept the Reds as definite contenders. But this much is clear:

Either the Reds are much better than anybody expected—or the champion Braves are worse. Yesterday's win, for example, was their second straight over Boston, their third in four games this year.

On Tuesday, they knocked off Warren Spahn, top left-hander. Yesterday, they staked 24-game winner Johnny Sain to four runs, then gave him the "business."

Maybe the Reds are due for a dive, maybe they're just getting by on the inspirational touch of Manager Bucky Walters.

Even so, no club pins back the ears of the league's best one-two pitching punch in successive games without having something beside the right idea. Anyhow, here's a tip for what it may be worth:

Don't laugh off the Reds—or any club on the "major" time this year—at least, until the joke gets to its point.

Meanwhile, there was nothing funny about the last two days for either the Giants or Braves. Tied at the top, they started confidently into the league's westwing Tuesday, and promptly went oh-for-two, the Giants blowing another, 5-3, to sound Pirate pitching.

Right now, the thing is getting the old see-saw stuff in both leagues. The Dodgers, winning another from the last-place Cubs 14-5, have scored 22 runs in two days, and are on their way up again. Last week, they couldn't beat anybody.

• • •

MEANTIME, take the Phillies—they've cleaned up a total of eight out of 10 from the Dodgers and Cardinals to date. And they've only won 13, all told. Incidentally, they made it two straight over the moribund Cards yesterday, 3-2.

Equally confusing is an American League situation, which finds the two favorites—Boston and Cleveland—running a respective 6-7 in the official standing.

Yesterday, the champion Indians lost their fifth straight, and suffered their fifth shutout in the last eight games, in being knocked off, 6-0, by the Yankees and Vic Raschi's two-hitter. Likewise, Tommy Henrich's two-homer day at the expense of a new non-potent Bob Feller.

It was Cleveland's low-ebb of two seasons. No lower, though, than were last week's Red Sox who, with yesterday's 7-4 decision over Chicago, are beginning to show symptoms of restored sanity.

The Yanks are riding high again, three games in front to themselves—and ex-Indian Ed Robinson, who belted his seventh homer last night in the eighth inning with two on to give the Senators a 6-3 win, and take the second-place Tigers down a peg.

Until Robinson did his stuff, the Tigers almost won against Paul Calvert and others with only one hit—which didn't even figure in their scoring.

Another homer, Sherman Loller's, came with two on in the sixth at Philadelphia to give the Browns an 8-6 victory over the Athletics.
